Red Hat Dispatch

You are dispatched to the college dormitory for a 22-year-old female with worsening skin condition involving the face, chest, and upper back. She reports inflamed painful bumps under the skin, blackheads, whiteheads, and large tender pus-filled lesions.

Symptoms have progressed over the past several weeks. Pt reports facial tenderness, swelling around several lesions, oily skin, and occasional drainage. Patient also reports emotional distress related to their appearance. Campus security advises patient is awake, alert, and breathing normally. No difficulty breathing, severe bleeding, or other immediate life-threatening symptoms reported.
